How to use this guide

The topic lists are broken into groups of diagnoses which are categorised according to symptoms and clinical systems. My reason for presenting in this way is to help with the organisation of your knowledge. In addition, you need to identify the distinguishing features of the illness scripts that allow you to decipher between the differentials for presentations within these categories (note that some diagnoses may belong to multiple categories). To learn the distinguishing features, compare the illness scripts for the diagnoses within the categories. I have placed the diagnoses that I consider to be most important in bold. For each of the diagnoses you will need to know:

- Illness scripts (risk factors, symptoms and signs)
- Differential diagnoses
- Investigations
- Management

Below the topic lists you will find resources arranged by type: Guidelines, Therapeutic guidelines, How to treat, AJGP, AFP, Check, Others. I have also placed the most useful resources that cover, in my opinion, important topics in bold. There are too many resources to expect that you will read them all. You will need to prioritise based on 1) useful resources for important topics (in bold) 2) areas of your personal knowledge deficiency and 3) personal learning style preferences. Hope this helps!
